SERVIA MAY HAVE A DISASTROUS WAR

The Army Is Not United on the Choice of Prince Kara georgevitch as the Future King.

POWERS HAVE DECIDED

Will Sever All Diplomatic Relations and Demand Punishment of the Assassins of the Dead King and Queen.

Rome, June 13.—It is announced here today that by an agreement between the different powers all diplomatic relations with Servia are to be broken off temporarily. In a semi-official note the powers demand of the Servian king to do justice against the murderers of the dead king and queen.

Menace to Europe
The note while not official voices the sentiments of the powers and says that Europe cannot tolerate that the assassins go unpunished or that they occupy high governmental positions. They say they will enforce.

Against Kara georgevitch

Belgrade, June 13.—Feeling against the prince, Kara georgevitch becoming king of Servia is daily becoming stronger and even the army or parts of it are becoming hostile. The army is now divided between Kara georgevitch and Prince Mirko of Montenegro, for the new ruler.

Fear Civil War

In many quarters civil war is feared if the new king is proclaimed on Monday as is now planned. Story that the Nisch garrison was marching on Belgrade is not true. One more victim of the assassins' died this morning.

Waiting a Call

Geneva, June 13.—Prince Kara georgevitch, the newly chosen king of Servia is still here and says that until he receives official word he is chosen king, he will remain here.

Have Recognized Government

Washington, D. C., June 13.—American representatives in Belgrade have been notified to recognize the provisional government.

Geneva, June 13.—Prince Peter Kara georgevitch, the newly proclaimed king of Servia, gave an interview in which he repeated his disclaimer of any complicity, direct or indirect, in the assassinations of King Alexander and Queen Draga. He expressed his detestation of the crime, and gave a brief outline of his own political tendencies. Replying to a series of direct questions, Prince Peter said:

New King Is Surprised.

"It is true my partisans have a complete organization in Servia with which I am in frequent communication. I know from other sources that the discontent of the Servian people had reached its height, but I could not possibly have foreseen the events of the other night. I in no way contributed to their preparation and I took no part, direct or indirect, in them. On the contrary; their perpetration surprised me."

I calmly await the trend of events. So long as no formal proposals reach me I have no reason to leave Geneva and I will remain here. No one has yet asked me to return to Servia. No one has yet offered me the crown. I am even without news of the members

Burial of Royal Couple.

Belgrade, June 13.—King Alexander and Queen Draga were buried at 1:30 o'clock Friday morning in the family vault of the Obrenovitchs in the chapel of the cemetery of St. Mark.

The strictest privacy was maintained in order to avoid hostile demonstrations. Two coffins were brought in by servants and carried up to the room where the bodies of the assassinated king and queen were lying. The corpses were then put in the coffins and the latter were placed in a bier, which was hurriedly driven to the old cemetery, where the other members of the Obrenovitch family are interred. In addition to the attendants only two priests were present at the funeral. The metropolitan of Belgrade was absent. The whole ceremony lasted only a few minutes.

The autopsy held has proved that the late king received thirty shots wounds, many of them deadly. Queen Draga had numerous shot and saber wounds, and it is alleged that her body was torn in a barbaric fashion.

AUSTRALIA WANTS BRITISH FRONTIER

Melbourne, June 13.—In view of the exposed condition of the British New Guinea frontier contagious to the German and Dutch territories, the Australian government has opened confidential pourparlers in order to ascertain the possibility of effecting exchanges of territory.

Two Marshfield banks have purchased the $10,000 severe bonds issued by the city, paying therefor a premium of $1,653.66.

SULTAN FEARS BEING KILLED

Albanian Troops at Imperial Palace Attack Inner Guard and Wage Fierce Conflict.

(Special by Scripps-McCabe.) Berlin, June 13.—A Constantinople dispatch says this morning that civil war has broken out within the sacred walls of the place of the sultan this morning, and that many of the rebels have been killed.

Albanian Rise

The Albanian troops garrisoning the imperial palace this morning attacked the inner guard of Asiatic troops and for a time nearly overcame them. They were finally defeated and driven off the field suffering large losses.

Great Excitement

This attack following so closely upon the massacre at Belgrade has thoroughly frightened the sultan and he will redouble his guards from now on, fearing assassination or imprisonment.

OARSMEN LEAVE FOR EAST TO-DAY

University of Wisconsin Crews Start for Big Races at Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

(Special by Scripps-McCabe.) Madison, Wis., June 13.—Both varsity and freshman crews were given a stiff row yesterday afternoon, the varsity being put over the four-mile course at their best speed. The freshmen waited at the two miles, making their start after the varsity had passed them two lengths.

Coch O'Dea anticipated that they would be able to beat the varsity in, but instead the varsity increased the lead another length at the finish, having a total lead of two lengths a net gain of one. The stroke was hit up to the fastest the varsity has used this year.

Dean took Jordan's place in the varsity shell and Bodenbach of Helzel with the freshmen.

The crews took there last rows here this morning. At 6 o'clock the three crews will leave over the North-Western road. Reaching Chicago at 9:45, they will stay at the Lexington hotel until 11 a. m. Sunday.

Coch Andy O'Dea has received assurances that the new shell, the Forward, will be at Poughkeepsie Tuesday morning ready for the varsity, being sent direct from Cambridge.

Managers Are Seeking Help In All the Large Cities In the Near District.

(Special by Scripps-McCabe.) Chicago, Ill., June 12.—Chicago hotel patrons this morning were offered a menu consisting of bread, crackers, eggs, fruit and coffee. Thousands accepted this fare rather than go out to some restaurant for better.

In some of the larger hotels regular meals were served but only under the greatest difficulty. Many of the regular guests prepared their own meals in their rooms, buying canned goods and bread and fruit.

Ask for Help

FRANCIS JOSEPH PUBLICLY STRUCK

Emperor of Austria Assailed By Man Who Is Roughly Handled by Crowd.

(Special by Scripps-McCabe.) Vienna, June 13.—While the Emperor Francis Joseph was out driving Friday a man on foot with a cane rushed up to the carriage. He struck at the emperor, but the blow fell upon the mud guard over the carriage wheel. His majesty, seeing the man rush forward, leaned back in the carriage and thus got out of danger.

The coachman lashed at the stranger and urged his horses forward. As the carriage moved on the crowd seized the emperor's assailant and beat him, crying: "Knock him down! This is not Servia!"

The police placed the man under arrest. The evening papers issued extras of the alleged attempt on the emperor's life.

At the police station the prisoner was recognized as Jacob Reich, an unemployed commercial agent, who called at the Hofburg Jan 8, and insisted on seeing the emperor. He declared that he was the son of God and had brought his majesty an important communication from the Almighty. Reich, who is pronounced to be insane, was incarcerated at that time, but had since been released.

(Special by Scripps-McCabe.) Vienna, June 13.—A dispatch from Rome appearing in an evening paper announces that Pope Leo died suddenly today from heart failure. While the report is unconfirmed still it bears the resemblance of truth as

Recent Reports

Several reports have emanated from Rome within the past few days

that his holiness was very ill, but they have all been contradicted lately.

The revision of the old Kara georgevitch dynasty is regarded here as the most promising and most natural solution of the problems which have worried Servia for so long.

FORESTRY PLANS ARE MADE EASY

How a Farmer May Practice It
On His Woodlot With Ease:

A unique way of dealing with forest problems is to illustrate and solve them by means of diagrams, as has been done by Henry S. Graves and R. T. Fisher in a bulletin entitled "The Woodlot," issued by the Bureau of Forestry of the department of agriculture. The bulletin is intended for the guidance of farmers and other owners of small timber holdings in southern New England who desire to improve the condition of their timber.

In this bulletin forestry has been reduced to a series of pictures—outline drawings of trees of various sorts in different relations to one another. The simplicity of the idea is such that the reader, even without any technical knowledge of forestry, can get from the pictures just the information he needs in order to practice forestry on his lands. In the series of forty outline drawings every problem in improving woodlots that occurs in southern New England is included. This means that any New England farmer can find the conditions on his own woodlot definitely shown by the outline drawings, and he can see from the same drawings just what he should do in order to practice real, sound forestry on his land.

Of course the bulletin cannot make offhand a forester out of a farmer; but it does give him such a specific information that he will know how to go about the task of handling his own forest problems—and that is just the sort of information the farmer has been asking for. Everywhere in New England there is the keenest interest in forestry, and the Bureau of Forestry has not men enough to answer the demands made upon it by farmers who ask for personal instruction in putting their woodlots under forest management. "The Woodlot" was prepared in order to supply such men with the information of which they were most in need and which would enable them in most cases to be independent of the services of the forester. The drawings were made from sketches in the field; they represent stands of timber as they actually appeared in the locality named in the line below. Each tree is labeled with number and the name of the species, and on the opposite page is explained what trees should be cut and what should be left, with the reasons for such treatment.

A clear exposition is made in the first part of the bulletin of what is meant by improvement cuttings and reproduction cuttings, why and how they are made, and how they are beneficial. The good effects of thinning are very clearly shown by a series of photographs of forests before and after they have been thinned. The bulletin contains also suggestions for pruning, protection of the woods from fire, grazing, insects, and wind, and a general discussion of the character of woodlands of southern New England, and of the practicability of forestry.

EXILED SERVIAN TALKS OF HOME

JOHN GOLLMAR WAS DRIVEN FROM BELGRADE, SERVIA.

EMPLOYED BY PARKER CO.

In His Country He Was Editor of a Paper Hatting Queen Draga.

John Gollmar, a former citizen of the city of Belgrade, Servia, and for the last year holding the position of foreign correspondent for the Parker Pen Co., gives the newly proclaimed king's father in a long line of ancestry, if he is not assassinated or dethroned before that time. This king's father in a long line of ancestry, was the first to die a natural death. Mr. Gollmar was personally acquainted with the son of King Karageorgievitch, and had also met the assassinated king and queen. He believes that the government of Belgrade will now run quietly for awhile anyway, though it is not likely to last very long, because of the almost continual internal strife that has been waged in that kingdom for so long a time.

An Exile.

Mr. Gollmar is an exile from his native country and was forced to leave his home and friends over a year ago. He was born in the city of Belgrade and spent his early life there. He is an interesting talker and considering his short stay in this country, has acquired a remarkable mastery of the language.

The cause of Mr. Gollmar's exile was his writings in connection with a Belgrade newspaper. The sentiment of the paper was very radical. His writing and position as editor were the cause of his being obliged to leave his native home. It happened in this way.

Forced To Leave.

...in Belgrade, as in all the larger cities there is a press club and Mr. Gollmar who is well known in journalistic circles was an influential member. One evening in November, in the year 1902 with a number of friends who were having a social time, Mr. Gollmar was approached by the police and given to understand that it would be wise for him to leave the city immediately. In half an hour, with some others, he started from the town and crossed the river into Austria, the next day the news of his exile reached him and he continued through Austria into Russia. Four weeks were spent in wandering in the Kingdom of the Czar, and during this time he communicated with friends at home to ascertain if a pardon was likely or possible in the near future. Finding that there was no hope for this, Mr. Gollmar sailed for New York where he spent another month, afterwards accepting the position with the Janesville company.

Mr. Gollmar says that in Servia very few newspaper men, who have been exiled have ever been pardoned, although many students who have been sent from the country in recent years have been allowed to return. However, the new king was himself an exile for over thirty years, so, "he knows how it feels" says Mr. Gollmar, and may be more kindly disposed towards some outcasts from the country than was the former king.

Well Educated.

Mr. Gollmar has what would be considered an extended college education in this country. In Servia what are really the colleges and universities are called "high schools" and the lower grade institutions are called "normal schools". The courses in each of these schools are four years in length. Mr. Gollmar also spent four years in a commercial college.

He can understand and speak six languages; German, French, Russian, Hungarian, English and Serbian. All of these, except his native tongue, he learned during his many travels. He has been in the newspaper business for eight years and writes now for one or two papers in eastern cities.

Fond of Home.

He is fond of his native city and in spite of his banishment, and would like to return if he was pardoned and his estate returned to him. This was sold by the government when he was forced from the country. Belgrade is the capital of Servia and is a fine city with a population of about 50,000. There are many beautiful buildings, palaces and parks. When Mr. Gollmar heard of the assassination of King Alexander and Queen Draga he cabled his friends in Belgrade to intercede for him and they will see what can be done now towards securing a pardon and returning to him his home.

The senate is expected to meet in August and it is then that the pardon will be secured, if at all and Mr. Gollmar may return. If he decides to remain his wife will come here in the fall. Mr. Gollmar likes this country and Janesville and it is quite likely that he will not go back to his native land.

BETSY ROSS AND THE OLD FLAG HOUSE

By ISAAC L. KIP

THE BETSY ROSS HOUSE AS IT APPEARS TODAY.

(Copyright, 1903, by W. L. Vail.)
PART from its unique symbolism and the noble associations clustering about its folds, the American flag has a special history which is of interest on Independence day. It did not float at Lexington and Bunker Hill nor wave over Independence hall on July 4, 1776. It became the flag of our country upon its formal adoption by the Continental congress, June 14, 1777.

The patriotic interest which of late years has centered especially upon the events of the Revolution has turned very positively to the details and circumstances involved with the origin and adoption of the stars and stripes as a national emblem, and a movement has long been under way to preserve for posterity the house where the young Quaker matron, Betsy Ross, with Washington's co-operation and approval, designed and perfected the first American flag.

The old flag house stands at 239 Arch street, Philadelphia, which is one of the most thronged and bustling streets of that great city. High stores tower on either side, and all around, in front and rear, activity as intense as any city can show is in fullest exercise. It is from this cause that this venerable relic has been most imperiled. Trade lags in its progress east environs even upon the site, and repeated efforts have been made to sacrifice sentiment to service. In view of all circumstances the fact of its preservation is almost miraculous. Other historic places have passed away under exposure to the same conditions which have threatened this. The house where Jefferson wrote the Declaration of Independence, the house Washington made his home while liv-

THE ROSS HOUSE AS IT APPEARED IN 1777. In the city and many other localities which would now be of priceless value have succumbed to the invasion of private interest. What enhances the marvel of the deliverance of the flag house from the fate which has befallen its peers is the fact that for a large portion of the time it has occupied its place it had no remissive interest.

It is only of comparatively recent date that the people of this country awoke to the fact that the nation had a past or learned to make historic association a standard of value. Antiquarian interest does not date far back of the Centennial era. Prior to that our young nation lived more in the future than in the past. And, furthermore, it must be borne in mind that until a few years ago the flag house was private property, passing by purchase or inheritance into the hands of different owners, each with perfect legal right to make such disposition of it as might seem desirable, and with abundant opportunity, through frequent solicitation, to surrender the title deed. For the longer part of the time the building has been exposed to such contingencies there was not even public sentiment to restrain any owner from sending it to pass into oblivion. Efforts also have been repeatedly made to have it taken down and re-erected in other cities, and even of congress, a committee was appointed to draft a design, and accordingly one day in the early summer of 1776 Mrs. Ross was surprised by the entrance into her little shop of General Washington and Robert Morris, conducted thither by George Ross, who was well aware of the skill of his young kinswoman and so brought her the opportunity which eventually gave her fame.

The purpose of the call was soon made known, and to prevent interruption she took them into the back room. General Washington, with his eminent talent for details, had been studying a design, but upon conferring with his hostess it soon became apparent that she was more competent to elaborate the idea than themselves, and the committee agreed to submit the entire matter to her taste and discretion. The result of that memorable interview, which has invested that little room with such honor, is well known. Her design met general approval, and on the 14th day of June, 1777, was accepted and adopted by the Continental congress as the national emblem. This is the nation's debt to Betsy Ross. It was her correctness of taste and accuracy in proportion that devised the banner which has stood and will stand for all time as the standard of the land over which it waves. Something else might have been formed and framed, but nothing could have been more harmonious or simple or prophetic, and through the identification of herself with the flag Betsy Ross became a historic personage and is enrolled on the honored list of Revolutionary characters.

The adoption of the flag secured for Betsy Ross the authorization of the government to continue the work, and for many years she found active employment in the increasing call for flags as the nation enlarged its boundaries. It seems a pity that the original flag could not have been preserved. Had it survived through all the intervening years it would have been a priceless precious relic now. But no peculiar value seems to have been set upon it. It was used on the field as any other intimately associated, was John Claypole, a Philadelphian and a Revolutionary soldier, who was wounded in battle and taken prisoner and carried also to Mills prison. He was afterward exchanged for a British prisoner and, returning to his home, delivered Captain Ashburne's dying message to his wife, became himself captivated by her attractions and in due time married her. But the same sad fatality attended her third marriage.

15th day of June, 1777, the day after the adoption of the flag, she was married to John Ashburne, captain of the privateer Lucifer, who, while not enlisted in the navy, did his country good service on the seas and struck many a blow against British craft. But the fortunes of war eventually went against him, as his vessel was captured by a British frigate, and the gallant captain was immured in Mills prison, England, where he died about two years after marriage. Two children were born from this marriage, one of whom died in infancy, and the other, a daughter, lived to become the wife of Adam Sullivan.

might have been and was lost in the attack on Fort Mifflin in the autumn following its adoption. It was not captured, but having probably been torn by shot from its staff it was blown away by the wind and in all likelihood submerged in the Schuylkill river.

...Forty Years Ago...

Janesville Daily Gazette, Saturday, June 13, 1863.—Read Major Britton's letter. See what our brave soldiers have endured in the splendid campaign before Vicksburg. Without tents, sometimes on quarter rations, long marches in intense heat, without change of clothing for many weeks, some of them barefooted and fighting the rebels every day.

About 4,000 rebel prisoners have recently arrived at Indianapolis, taken at the battle of Big Black river. They are in full keeping with their cause—hard.

Good for Co. E.—Postmaster Burgess received a package of money yesterday from the boys of Co. E. 22nd regiment, Wisconsin, containing $2,175 for distribution to their friends in Janesville.

Nassau papers are again indignant because the gunboat Rhode Island had chased the steamers Margaret and Jesse, and the schooner Seims within the prescribed limits of maritime law, firing a full broadside at one of them, which plowed up the ground near the dwellings on the shore, and wounded two fishermen.

Special to the Tribune.—Five deserters who came within our lines on the Rappahannock, yesterday, report General Lee marching with his whole force up the river, a statement which is confirmed by other evidence. The observations of army aeromats are somewhat hazardous in their duty, one who went up in a balloon near the Warrentown house, this forenoon, was admonished to descend by the rebels who opened a brisk fire upon the balloon with shells.

Skirmishing is going on continuously at Port Hudson. Our forces are busily constructing batteries along the entire line, which will be complete and opened against the enemy on the 16th.

Advices from New Orleans state that General Sherman is better and the probability is that not only his life but his leg will be saved, though he will be lame for life.

STRANGE FREAKS OF SOCIETY FADS

Yale Students Have Set the Fashion to Go Without Their Hats.

In that far-famed town, New Haven, Conn., a new fad has arrived. It is nothing more or less than that hats are becoming unfashionable and hundreds of students are walking the streets minus any headgear, so the city bids fair to become the hatless town. The college boys set the craze going, but it is spreading to all classes. In the evening the trolley cars may be seen full of men and women wearing no hats. Society girls come down town to do their shopping bareheaded, although some swing their exquisite creations of millinery art by the pins; and on all sides the scenes on the streets during the warm hours of the day, make it appear that a strong wind has carried away many "lids." Such a fad will not go in Janesville—in this June weather.

Mrs. S. H. Wilbur leaves this evening for Mr. Vernon, Washington, for an extended visit with her son Leslie.

STEADY DEMAND AT HIGH PRICES

GREAT OUTPUT OF PIG IRON

With the Settlement of Labor Troubles There Will Be a Resumption of Work in the Building Line and Stocks Will Dwindle.

New York, June 13.—"Except in those branches of business that are always quiet at this season reports indicate a steady demand and prices of commodities are firmly maintained. Manufacturing returns are irregular, idleness in textile lines partially offsetting the good effect of activity elsewhere. Earnings of railroads reporting for the first week of June are only 3 per cent larger than last year and 7.8 per cent greater than in 1901, a condition due entirely to Western floods.

Consumption of Pig Iron.

"That furnace stocks of pig iron increased only 40,000 tons despite the unprecedented output testifies to the great consumption of the steel industry. Quotations are without alteration, although much business is delayed by labor troubles. In case of a general settlement of these conflicts there would be resumption of work on many buildings, and, including the requirements of railroads, a heavy tonnage would be sought."

R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade makes the foregoing summary of the industrial situation. Continuing, the review says:

Confidence in Future.

"It is an evidence of confidence in the future that blast furnace operators are forcing production beyond all previous maximum figures. While the demand for structural steel has diminished, there is notable inquiry for rails and plates. Machinery and hardware lines are doing remarkably well for the season, which is usually quiet in these departments. Coke ovens are surpassing all previous records for activity, and the output of anthracite coal promises to establish a new high water mark this year above 60,000,000 tons.

Cotton Goods Are Higher.

"Cotton goods again average slightly higher in price, the advances being insisted upon by producers on account of the raw material, and in no degree attributable to increased anxiety to place contracts on the part of buyers. Aside from a more liberal demand for print cloth yarn fabrics for converting and printing purposes, there is no evidence of activity. On the other hand, supplies are not accumulating at the mills owing to curtailment of production, not only voluntarily, but by strikes and storms.

Buyers Are Conservative.

"Conservatism prevails among buyers of staple wools and worsteds, while little interest is shown in new lines of light weights for next spring. In so far as market conditions are concerned carpets are the most satisfactory of the textile products. Footwear conditions continue most prosperous. Leather and hides are strong and active.

"Failures this week were 215 in the United States, against 162 last year, and fourteen in Canada, compared with twenty a year ago."

RUINS OF ANCIENT CITY FOUND.

Valuable Archeological Discovery Made in Mexican Forest.

Mexico City, June 13.—The ruins of a large city have been discovered in a remote part of the state of Puebla by Francisco Rodriguez, an archeologist, who has just made a report of his find to the government authorities here. The city contains large pyramids and extensive fortifications. It is situated in the midst of a dense forest, and a large amount of excavation will be necessary to learn its true extent and importance. A commission will be appointed by the government to explore the ruins.

WISCONSIN WEATHER FORECAST

THE CURRENTS OF LIFE.

In describing a shipwreck that occurred many years ago, the writer says, that being storm-tossed for fourteen days, land was sighted. As the vessel drifted in toward the beach, a landlocked harbor with a narrow entrance came in view, and every effort was made to enter it.

Just as success seemed certain the bow of the vessel was caught in two currents running in opposite directions and soon the boat was stranded on a bar at the mercy of the waves, but the land was so near that the crew and all on board were saved.

Some one in writing about this incident compares it to the voyage of life, and says that a shipwreck is sometimes a blessing in disguise, and especially if the life, the most important part of the cargo is saved.

Men sometimes engage in business that is disreputable. It may have been handed down to them from their fathers, or they may have taken it up because it was the first present ed. They discover in the course of events, that to continue, means loss of character and reputation.

To get out means financial loss, but the gain of all that is worth saving, and as they battle with the currents that are contending for mastery, it will not be a misfortune if the bark is stranded and the man is saved to his manhood.

The young man who starts on the voyage of life determined to do something, may be wrecked half a dozen times before he finds free sailing, but in the wreck he retains hope, and unashamed reputation the disaster has proved a blessing.

Life is full of currents which run at cross purposes, and the mariner comes in contact with them at every turn of the wheel. Currents of doubt and currents of hope frequently form an eddy, and the frail vessel is tossed about and is sometimes caught in its vortex.

The tide of passion and envy frequently carry the bark far away from the course and wreck it on the beach before the voyage is half completed.

The shore of time is lined with wreckage, and many of the disasters are due to careless navigation. It is claimed that a large percentage of the men engaged in business become financial wrecks before the voyage is finished.

The greatest storms that ever come to human experience, are not financial storms. They break upon the soul at times, like a flash of lightning out of a clear sky, and engulf it in Egyptian darkness.

The angel of death comes into the home and calls away a loved one who seemed to be needed more than any other member of the household. There is no ray of light that is bright enough to penetrate the gloom or no word of friendly cheer that brings consolation. The storm of sorrow has produced gray hairs in a night, and wrecked the most hopeful voyage in an hour.

A cyclone of trouble and disappointment strikes a home. The boy or girl, who had been cherished by the father and mother, goes to the bad, and disgraces the family. As they view the wreckage the old people say "death would have been better and not so hard to endure."

The currents of life are not confined to the shore line at either end of the voyage. They are encountered in mid-ocean, and one of them the current of evil, is ever moving at rapid pace.

It is so easy to go with the tide, that this current is always filled with drifters, and wrecks are of daily occurrence.

The other the current of good, is always flowing in the right direction, but its movements are so quiet, that it frequently fails to attract. The voyage may be made in either current, and the individual mariner alone determines which it shall be.

The former has a destination without a harbor, and has but little to offer on the passage. The latter furnishes peace and happiness on the way, and leads to a heaven of safety.

In planning for the voyage of life the important question for every boy and girl to decide, is, "which route shall I take?" The one that is noted for safety, or the one that is famous for disaster.

It is possible for a boy to drift with the current of evil until he strikes the shoals and becomes a physical and moral wreck, and still be saved, but he will never be the man that he might have been.

The girl who thoughtlessly drifts out with the tide, may possess strength enough to get back, but the experience has contributed nothing to her womanhood.

This glad month of June with its long bright days, laden with blossoms and fragrance, is the banner month of the year. It unlocks the storhouse of nature, and forecasts in promise the golden harvest.

It is a significant period in another sense, for all over the land, little groups of young men and women are standing in the doorway of preparation, ready to launch out upon the uncertain sea of life's great possibilities.

The cargo has been carefully stowed, and there is no lack of canvas, but the bark has yet to be tested for ballast. The sailing day is propitious, and the hearty bon-voyage, that greets them on every hand, inspires hope and courage as they stand on the shore line and look away beyond the breakwater and lighthouse to the busy thoroughfare, where the horizon ever recedes, as the mariner approaches.

Many of these young people have planned a destination, and they propose to set their canvas, and make a quick voyage. They will distance the old craft that their fathers and mothers have been content to navigate for forty years, because they have mastered the chart, and pulled an oar in four mile race.

The old gentlemen says to the boy, as he attempts to give him a few sailing directions, "That point of land that you can just discover to the left, is a dangerous coast, where the currents come together with such force that it is difficult to hold a steady course." The mother says to the girl,

"That choppy sea that sparkles in the sunlight in the distance, covers a reef that has shipwrecked many a mariner before the voyage was fairly begun."

They smile at the note of warning and say, "Never fear for us. We have no notion of being wrecked."

It is well to be hopeful, and full of confidence, when the vessel is launched, but it also is well to remember that the currents of life never change their course, and that the storms are liable to break without warning. The old bark with battered hull, and shredded canvas, is frequently called upon to go to the rescue and the young mariner discovers that he did not know it all.

The currents and the storms are blessings in disguise. The oak would be less a monarch, but for the tempest that rages through its branches and causes its tendrils to take a firmer grip.

So the currents and the storms of life develop the best there is in character. It is possible to hold a steady course and outlive the storm.

The Gazette expresses popular sentiment in wishing the June graduates a successful voyage.

SERVIA'S CRIME.

The assassination of King Alexander and the royal household of Servia, is a dark blot on the world's history, that will not soon be erased. While the king was a tyrant and the little empire a kingdom of bondage worse than slavery, he was nevertheless the king. The fault is in the system that perpetuates this class of monarchs.

The people of Servia may not be capable of self government. If not they would be better served under an intelligent protectorate.

The time is coming, and it is not far distant, when many of these smaller nations will be submerged, and when a handful of the world's great powers will be in absolute control.

While these conditions may seem a hardship, they are in keeping with the advance of civilization. Cuba, Porto Rico, Hawaii and the Philippines, are infinitely better off today than they have ever been before.

Servia is unfortunate in being surrounded by a group of powers which are principally interested in accession of territory, but she had better be absorbed by any of them than to continue as an independent nation. The assassination of a ruler however, corrupt, is an offense that should not be tolerated, and it results in wiping the little empire off the map, it will not be considered a great loss.

Servia has about the same population as Wisconsin, with about one-third the area of the state. It is an insignificant empire to create so much of a disturbance.

Some times some of the city fathers when they are looking for money to pay the city bills, will discover that a judicious tax on dogs would help the finances of the municipality in a most wonderful shape.

Rochester, N. Y. Democrat, and Chronicle: Thanks largely to the

there are as many dogs as tax payers in Janesville it is safe to say and a dollar on dogs would not only enrich the city but would also do away with the snapping curs that infest the streets. Why not derive it and pay the city's debts?

When 1,000 men are on a strike it means less demand for the necessities of life in any given community. When this number is multiplied many times it means a weak market and lighter production in every line of manufacture. This means a fore-runner of hard times, in which labor suffers more than any other class. Better to settle differences in some other way.

Of course King Alexander and Queen Draga had been having a whale of a time with their Servian subjects and Alexander was said to have been a coward and a bully still when the time came he shoved his gun up into his persecutors faces and shot one of them dead. It may have been a foolish action but nevertheless it was the act of a brave man defending his wife's honor.

Russia is too virtuous by half. Notice has been served to the world that outside help for the Jews is not wanted, and that any nation may discriminate against this class of immigration. At the same time she has served notice on the Jews to get out.

It is pleasing to notice that the strike ladies and gentlemen's union of Chicago hotels have stood up for their rights even if the guests are forced to cook their own breakfast and make their own beds.

The Chicago millionaire who is now in the clutches of the law charged with murder is said to be a true gentlemen and sportsman. Perhaps so but his dead victims also show that he was a dead shot.

It is amusing to notice the hurry some speaking sensational breeding papers are to find fault with a public man because the opportunity offers itself. Milwaukee has one of this variety and Chicago several.

St. Louis is getting an awful lot of free advertising for its World's Fair just at present and perhaps it may boom the fair and perhaps it may spoil it.

Italy is also taking its share of public notice with a cabinet trouble. Along side of an assassination it is but second class news however.

The governor is at his summer home and yet the state affairs go on just as regularly as they ever did.

All Europe seems to have a finger in the Servian pie if stories heard in Italy can be believed.

It is a long road that has no turns but a short one will sometimes be awfully crooked.

A man who believes he is the whole thing often wakes up the fact that he is nothing.

PRESS COMMENT

Milwaukee Sentinel: The simple truth is that Mr. Payne, feeling himself equipped at the start with an exceptional fund of practical experience in postal affairs, and aware of the weak places in the service, went into office with a resolve to "make a record" there for efficiency, progress, and practical reforms, and in President Roosevelt's recommendation there is ample evidence that he is doing what he set out to do. Mr. Roosevelt's pointed tribute to Mr. Payne should set at rest the idle chatter of cabinet dissensions and clear the air generally.

Neenah Times: Sir William Crookes, the great English chemist and electrical investigator, predicts that in the course of centuries "this world of atoms will dissolve into a multitude of revolving electrodes," and that "all matter may be resolved into nebulous clouds." But our people need feel no alarm, as by that time some other scientific gauze will appear and invent a process to knock the nebules and clouds and atoms out at first round, and the earth will go on revolving and doing business at the old stand.

Boston Globe: Russell Sage regularly keeps a balance of some $6,000,000 cash in New York's banks. Thus he is always ready when the gas man calls. Now Mr. Rockefeller it is said, will keep $20,000,000 of free cash that he can shift from bank to bank, and so to some extent control the money market. It's a pleasant way.

Philadelphia Inquirer: Thomas A. Edison has just gone into politics, and the people of the Oranges are excited. They fear he will invent a new political machine which will baffle the oldest experts. Oh, let it be soon.

Cleveland Plain Dealer: It is proposed in Boston to run a special car late in the evening for the convenience of intoxicated men. But even Boston drinkers may be puzzled to read the label on the "air-conditioned" when it comes along.

Some times some of the city fathers when they are looking for money to pay the city bills, will discover that a judicious tax on dogs would help the finances of the municipality in a most wonderful shape.

Rochester, N. Y. Democrat, and Chronicle: Thanks largely to the efforts of President Roosevelt, it is now pretty generally understood that the validity of the Monroe doctrine depends solely upon the physical ability of the United States to enforce it.

Baltimore Herald: Civilization is telling over in the Philippines. A Filipino has sued a United States officer for false imprisonment on the ground that his business and health have been injured by confinement in jail.

Philadelphia Press: Grover Cleveland may not get a third term nomination, but it must be admitted that he is hiding the Parker boomer from public view at present.

Milwaukee News: Gen. O'Connor of the French army has wiped out the town of Flugis and subdued the rebellious tribesmen. These Frenchmen are terrors when they get their fighting blood up.

Chicago News: It is said that much bad butter is sold for axle grease; but one must fear that much bad axle grease is being sold for butter.

IN HONOR OF LATEST ADDITION

HELD IN THE AUDITORIUM

All Toasts Were on Common Subject of Different Phases of School Life.

If a delicious supper, bright toasts, inspiring music, and a general spirit of good cheer can make a successful alumni banquet that of last evening was an unmixed success.

In the auditorium of the high school building the supper was served by the ladies of the order of the Eastern Star. Eighteen young ladies of the junior class that was—the senior class that is—acted in the capacity of waitresses. The purple and white decorations of commencement week were undisturbed. Purple gowns at each plate emphasized the class colors.

In the Auditorium

At a table in the form of a cross placed in the center of the hall were seated the members of the class of 1903. On either side of the central tables were three others. The class which graduated last year was seated at one table, the school board and faculty at another, and the remaining tables were given up to the alumni, regardless of class.

Without exception the addresses and toasts were bright and interesting, and the musical numbers won loud applause.

All Toasts Related

The happy plan had been hit upon of grouping all the toasts around one central theme—phases of school life. This gave a unity of purpose to the evening's program which added greatly to the general effect.

The menu for the evening was:

BURR SPRINGS MAY BE SOLD

It is Rumored that Chicago Parties Have Purchased the Property For $120,000.

It is rumored about the city today that Burr Springs has been sold to a Chicago syndicate for $120,000 and that with all probability a sanitarium will be erected and the famous waters of the spring bottled and sold. The story could not be authenticated at Burr Springs and Mrs. Burr was out of the city so could not be found. The Burr Springs are known throughout the country. At the world's fair in Chicago they were awarded a medal which appears on their bottles. Some years ago a company was formed to purchase the springs and establish a sanitarium, but the affair fell through at the last minute.

CHAPTER IV.

IT was a little after sunrise. The family had just left the breakfast-table when Bishop walked in. His shoes and trousers were damp with dew and covered with the dust of the road. His wife saw him entering the gate and called out to him from the hall:

"Well, I declare! Didn't you go to Atlanta?"

He came slowly up the steps, dragging his feet after him. He had the appearance of a man beaten by every storm that could fall upon a human being.

"Yes, I went," he said doggedly. He passed her and went into the sitting room, where his brother-in-law stood at the fireplace lighting his pipe with a live coal of fire on the tip of a stick. Abner Daniel looked at him critically, his brows raised a little as he puffed, but he said nothing. Mrs. Bishop came in behind her husband, sweeping him from head to foot with her searching eyes.

"You don't mean to tell me you walked out here this mornin'?" she cried. "Lord have mercy!"

"I don't know as I've prepared any set speech on the subject," said her husband testily, "but I walked. I could 'a' gone to a livery an' ordered out a team, but I believe that's more'n one way o' wearin' sackcloth an' ashes, an' the sooner I begin the better I'll feel."

Abner Daniel winked. The Scriptural allusion appealed to his fancy, and he smiled impulsively.

"That is," he said. "There's a whole way an' a half way. Some folks jest wear it next to the skin when it don't show, with broadcloth or silk on the outside. They think it scratches a little that'll satisfy the Lord an' hoodwink other folks. But I believe he meant it to be the whole hog or none."

Mrs. Bishop was deaf to this philosophy. "I don't see," she said in her own field of reflection—"I don't see, I say, how you got to Atlanta, attended to business, seed Adele an' got back beer at sunrise. Why, Alfred!"

But Bishop interrupted her. "Have you all had prayers yet?"

"No; you know we hadn't," said his wife, wondering over his strange manner. "I reckon it can pass jest this once, bein' as you are tired an' hasn't had nothin' to eat."

"No; it can't pass, muther. I don't want to touch a mouthful. Tell the rest of 'em to come in, an' you fetch me the book."

"Well!" Mrs. Bishop went out and told the negro woman and her daughter to stop washing the dishes and go to prayer. Then she hurried out to the back porch, where Alan was oiling his gun.

"Somethin's happened to yore pa," she said. "He acts queer an' says such strange things. He walked all the way from Darley this mornin' an' now wants to have prayers 'fore he touches a bite o' breakfast. I reckon we are ruined."

"I'm afraid that's it," opined her son as he put down his gun and followed her into the sitting room. Here the two negroes stood against the wall. Abner Daniel was smoking, and Bishop held the big family Bible on his quivering knees.

"Ef you mean to keep it up," Abner was saying argumentatively, "all right an' good, but I don't believe in sudden spurts o' worship. My bosses is blithed up ready to haul a load o' bark to the tannery, an' it may throw me a little late at dinner, but if you are a-goin' to make a daily business of it I'm with you."

"I'm a-goin' to be regular from now on," said Bishop, slowly turning the leaves of the tome. "I forgot what I read last."

"You didn't finish about Samson tyin' all them foxes' tails together," said Abner Daniel as he knocked the hot ashes from his pipe into the palm of his hand and tossed them into the chimney. "That sorter interested me. I wondered how that was a-goin' to end. I'd hate to have a puddle o' foxes with torches to their tails turned loose in my wheat jest 'fore cuttin' time. It must 'a' been a sight. I wondered what that was a-goin' to end."

"You'll wonder how you're a-goin' to end if you don't be more respectful," said his sister.

"Like the foxes, I reckon," grinned Abner—"with a eternal torch tied to me. Well, if I am treated that away I'll go into the business o' destruction an' set fire to everything I run across."

"Ain't you goin' to tell us what you did in Atlanta 'fore you have prayer?" asked Mrs. Bishop, almost resentfully.

"No, I hadn't!" Bishop snapped. "I'll tell you soon enough. I reckon I won't read this mornin'. Let's pray."

They all knelt reverently and yet with some curiosity, for Bishop often suited his prayers to important occasions, and it struck them that he might now allude to the subject bound up within him.

"Lord, God Almighty," he began, his lower lip hanging and quivering, as were his hands clasped in the seat of his chair, "thou knowest the struggle thy creatures are makin' on the face of the green globe to live up to the best of the' lights an' standards. As I bend before thee this mornin' I realize how small a beln' I am in thy sight an' that I ort to bow in humble submission to thy will, an' I do. For many years this family has enjoyed thy bounteous blessings. We've had good health an' the influence of a Bible readin', God teachin' community, an' our children has been educated in a way that raised 'em head an' shoulders above many o' the' associates an' even blood kin. I don't know exactly what an' how I've sinned, but I know I have displeased thee, for thy scourge has fallen hard an' heavy on my ambitions. I wanted to see my boy hear a good, obedient son an' my daughter than in Atlanta able to hold the' heads up among the folks they mix with, an' so I reached out. Maybe it was forbidden fruit heft out by a snake in the devil's service. I don't know thou knowest. Anyways, I steered my course out o' the calm waters o' content an' peace o' soul into the whirlpool rapids o'avarice an' greed. I 'lowed I was in a safe haven an' didn't dream o' the stormclouds hangin' over me till they bust in fury on my head. Now, Lord, my Father, give them hearts of patience an' forgiveness for the blunders o' thy servant. What I done I done in the bulldheaded way that I've always done things, but I meant good and not harm. These things we ask in the name of Jesus Christ, our blessed Lord and Master. Amen."

During the latter part of the prayer Mrs. Bishop had been staring at her husband through her parted fingers, her face pale and agitated, and as she rose her eyes were glued to his face.

"Now, Alfred," she said, "what are you goin' to tell us about the railroad? Is it as bad as brother Ab thought it would be?"

Bishop hesitated. It seemed as if he had even then to tear himself from the clutch of his natural stubbornness. He looked into all the anxious, waiting faces before he spoke, and then he gave in.

"Ab made a good guess. Ef I'd 'a' had his sense or Alan's, I'd 'a' made a better trade. It's like Ab said it was, only a sight wuss, a powerful sight wuss."

"Wuss?" gasped his wife in fresh alarm. "How could it be wuss? Why, Brother Ab said—"

"I never have told you the extent o' my deadlin's," went on Bishop in the current of confession. "I never even told Perkins yesterday. Fust an' last I've managed to rake in fully twenty thousand acres o' mountain land. I was goin' on what I 'lowed was a dead shore thing. I secured all I could lay my hands on, an' I did it in secret. I was afraid even to tell you about what Perkins said, thinkin' it might leak out an' spile my chances."

"But, father," said Alan, "you didn't have enough money to buy all that land."

"I got it up"—Bishop's face was dog-pedal, almost defiant of his overwhelming disaster—"I mortgaged this farm to get money to buy Maybury and Morton's four thousand acres."

"The farm you was going to deed to Alan?" gasped his wife. "You didn't include that?"

"Not in that dead!" groaned Bishop. "I swapped that to Phil Parsons, for his poplar an' cypress belt."

The words seemed to cut raspingly into the silence of the big room. Abner Daniel was the only one who seemed unmoved by the confession. He filled his pipe from the bowl on the mantelpiece and pressed the tobacco down with his forefinger; then he kicked the ashes to the chimney till he uncovered a small live coal. He eyed it for a moment, then dipped it up in the shovel, rolled it into his pipe and began to smoke.

"So I ain't a-goin' to git no yearly pass over the new road," he said, his object being to draw his brother-in-law back to Perkins' action in the matter.

"Perkins was a-dyin' to me," answered Bishop. "He hadn't admitted it yet, but he was a-dyin'. His object was to hep the Tompkins sell out for a decent price, but he can't be handled. He's got me on the hip."

"No," said Abner. "I'd rather keep on swappin' gold dollars for mountain land an' lettin' it go fer taxes 'an' to try to beat a lawyer at his own game. A courthouse is like the devil's abode, easy to git into, no outlet an' nothin' but scorch while you are there."

"Hush, fer the name o' goodness," cried Mrs. Bishop, looking at her husband. "Don't you see he's dyin' from it? Are you all a-goin' to kill 'im? What does a few acres o' land in debt amount to beside killin' a man 't's been tryin' to help us all? Alfred."

"I'm a-goin' to be regular from now on," said Bishop, slowly turning the leaves of the tome. "I forgot what I read last."

"You didn't finish about Samson tyin' all them foxes' tails together," said Abner Daniel as he knocked the hot ashes from his pipe into the palm of his hand and tossed them into the chimney. "That sorter interested me. I wondered how that was a-goin' to end. I'd hate to have a puddle o' foxes with torches to their tails turned loose in my wheat jest 'fore cuttin' time. It must 'a' been a sight. I wondered what that was a-goin' to end."

"You'll wonder how you're a-goin' to end if you don't be more respectful," said his sister.

"Like the foxes, I reckon," grinned Abner—"with a eternal torch tied to me. Well, if I am treated that away I'll go into the business o' destruction an' set fire to everything I run across."

"Ain't you goin' to tell us what you did in Atlanta 'fore you have prayer?" asked Mrs. Bishop, almost resentfully.

They all knelt reverently and yet with some curiosity, for Bishop often suited his prayers to important occasions, and it struck them that he might now allude to the subject bound up within him.

We've had good health an' the influence of a Bible readin', God teachin' community, an' our children has been educated in a way that raised 'em head an' shoulders above many o' the' associates an' even blood kin. I don't know exactly what did me an' you have when we started out but a log house boarded up on the outside, an' now we've got our children educated an' all of us in good health. I really believe it's a sign of God's mercy for us to mount an' fret under a thing like this."

"That's the talk," exclaimed Abner Daniel enthusiastically. "Now you are gittin' down to brass tacks. I've always contended—

"For God's sake, don't talk that way!" said Bishop to his wife. "You don't mean a word of it. You are jest a-sayin' it to try to keep me from seen' what a fool I am."

"You needn't worry about me, father," said Alan firmly. "I am able to look out for myself and for you and mother. It's done, and the best thing to do is to look at it in a sensible way. Besides, a man with 20,000 acres of mountain land paid for is not broken by a long jump."

"Yes, I'm gone," said Bishop, a wavering look of gratitude in his eye as he turned to his son. "I figured on it all last night. I can't pay the heavy interest an' come out. I was playin' for big stakes an' got left. That's nothing to do but give up. Me buyin' so much land has made it rise little, but when I begin to try to sell I won't be able to give it away."

"That's somethin' in that," opined Abner Daniel as he turned to leave the room. "I reckon I ought as well go haul that tan bark. I reckon you won't move out 'fore dinner."

Alan followed him out to the wagon.

"It's pretty tough, Uncle Ab," he said. "I hadn't the slightest idea it was so bad."

"I wasn't so shore," said Daniel. "But I was jest a-thinkin' in that. You've got a powerful good friend in Baybry Miller. He's the sharpest speculator in north Georgia. Ef I was you, I'd see him an' lay the whole thing before him. He'll be able to give you good advice, an' I'd take it. A feller that's made as much money as he has at his age won't give a friend bad advice."

"I thought of him," said Alan, "but I am a little afraid he will think we want to borrow money, and he never lets out a cent without the best security."

"Well, you needn't be afeard on that score," laughed the old man as he reached up on the high wagon seat for his whip. "I once heard 'im say that business an' friendship wouldn't mix any better 'n oil an' water."

To Be Continued.

In the broadest sense of the term minstrel is a universal institution.

I know there are many who say that nothing can be universal unless it pertains to the universe, the sun, moon, stars and the earth, and they are undoubtedly correct in a grammatical sense. Still I use the term universal advisedly, for if all the planets of the universe are inhabited as many scientists would have us believe, I still maintain that the minstrel is universal in that wherever mankind exists there are minstrels.

I have noticed it particularly in Washington. The minstrel are always sure of big audiences at the Capitol.

I have noticed there the foreign

Sincerity is always impressive, and ambassadors and ministers, most of them men of high title as well as rank, and the greatest of all sticklers for etiquette. When they get to the minstrels, rank and title seems to be forgotten. I have seen the Chinese minister representing the oldest civilization seated alongside the humblest laboring man of the youngest civilization; upon the other hand a United States senator, upon the other a horny handed son of toil, each admiring, applauding and laughing in common enjoyment.

Will appear at Myers Grand, Wednesday evening, June 17.

Tomorrow's game at Bleasdale's park is the deciding contest of the three which Janesville and Bass Creek have competed in this season.

The line-up which has been announced looks good on paper, and the manager of each team is confident that his men are a trifle better than they look. According to the announcement the men will hold the following positions:

Bass Creek—Newman, catcher; Saxe, pitcher; Broughton, short stop; Connell, first base; Cole, second base; Skelly, third base; Palmer, left field; Torny, center field; and Connell, right field.

Even before the Madison match play, the local golfers will be called upon to play in earnest. On Tuesday the qualifying round for the Richardson medal will be played. This will be a handicap event. The players who qualify will then be rehanded before the medal play begins. Sixteen players will qualify. The match play will begin in two weeks. Al. Schaller now holds the Richardson medal.

A mixed foursome and approaching contest will also be held on Tuesday. A drive from the top of Bunker Hill, an approach to the putting clock, and a play around the clock, will constitute the event. Sweepstakes prizes will go to the three low scores.

Every horse lover has his weather eye glued to the Derby candidates—the probable starters in Chicago's greatest race of the season, occurring one week from today. From present indications it seems likely that a larger field will go to the post than in any previous Derby. In the try outs this week a number of the candidates have been rather closely trimmed. OUT OF TENTS AND BLANKETS

APPEALS TO WAR DEPARTMENT

Acting Governor Northcott Asks Federal Authorities to Render Aid to the People of East St. Louis—Kansas City Needs Help.

Springfield, Ill., June 13.—Illinois has exhausted its resources in furnishing tents and blankets for the relief of the refugees from flood at East St. Louis and neighboring points and Acting Gov. Northcott has appealed to the war department of the United States for assistance and has requested 2,000 tents. In his message the acting governor requested that the tents be sent direct to East St. Louis at the earliest possible moment if the request be allowed.

There is one feature of the minstrels that has always impressed me and that is the democracy of the spectators.

I have noticed it particularly in Washington. The minstrel are always sure of big audiences at the Capitol.

I have noticed there the foreign strel troupe that bears his name which will shortly appear in this city. He is a student and philosopher who and its people that nothing else could give him. Continuing upon the subject he said.

"There is one feature of the minstrels that has always impressed me and that is the democracy of the spectators.

I have noticed it particularly in Washington. The minstrel are always sure of big audiences at the Capitol.

I have noticed there the foreign

Two hundred tents and 300 blankets were sent by express to East St. Louis and additional tents were sent to Chester. This practically clears the state arsenal of all available tents and blankets.

A message was received from Col.

J. S. Culver, commander of the Fifth regiment and in charge of the military forces at East St. Louis, asking that tents and blankets be sent to Al

Keechler, chairman of the relief committee in East St. Louis.

Mayor Asks for Rifles.

A telegram was received at the executive office from J. W. Scott, the mayor of Venice, requesting that twenty rifles be sent to Granite City, for use by the patrol guard in protecting property from river pirates. The arms were immediately started to that place.

It is reported from Chester that the waters have reached the walls of the southern state penitentiary at that place and fear is entertained that a portion of the walls of the prison may be undermined by the flood.

Adj. Gen. Smith expects that troops will be needed at East St. Louis at least ten days longer. They will be kept there until their presence is no longer necessary for protection of property or life.

Kansas City Needs Aid.

Kansas City, Kas., June 13.—Mayor Gilbert has sent the following telegram to E. F. Ware, commissioner of pensions, at Washington:

"The relief committee invites you to come to Kansas City, Kas., and see if you were correct in the statement that Kansas needs no aid. Four thousand families — 20,000 people — homeless here. Is it right for us who are not in need to let our pride prevent charity coming to those who are really suffering when we cannot furnish it?"

Ware Explains.

Washington, June 13.—Commissioner Ware of the pension office made the following explanation of his order discontinuing the soliciting of funds for Kansas flood sufferers in the pension bureau:

"I have not the slightest objections to Kansans contributing all they want to the fund, nor do I object to their being asked to give the money in this office, but they must leave the people of other states and the popular subscription idea alone. Kansans can take care of herself. If there is suffering and want the state has millions of dollars in bank to draw on."

Lumberman.

Letter to Messrs. Fifield Bros., Janesville, Wis.

Dear Sir: What is lumber worth?

"Depends on the lumber," you say

—"what sort do you want?"

That's how some people talk about paint. They ask: "What'll you paint my house for?"

The Yankee answer is: "How do you want it painted? One coat? two coats? three coats? first-class or cheap?"

The proper answer is: "I want the best paint put on as I ought to be."

That's Devoe; but the usual answer is: "I want a good job; but I want it cheap." Which means: I want you to paint it for nothing. I want to be fooled.

Lead and oil is the costliest paint there is; not the best; it used to be best. Devoe is best, since zinc came in: Devoe Ready Paint.

Zinc toughens the lead and doubles its wear.

Zinc costs no more than lead; and we grind by machinery.

We have no patent on zinc; but nobody else is treating it right. Devoe is your paint. Yours truly,

F. W. DEVOE & CO.

P. S. J. P. Baker sells Devoe paint.

Athletic contests, parades, great fireworks displays, patriotic meetings and religious services, grand chorus, military maneuvers by government troops, and on the concluding day a reception to the president of the United States and other distinguished guests, all contribute to a most elaborate program.

JUDGE'S DECISION FAVORS RAILROADS

Coal-Carriers Need Not Answer Certain Questions Before Interstate Commission.

New York, June 13.—As a result of the decision handed down by Judge Lacombe in the United States District Court in favor of the coal-carrying railroads on an appeal from the ruling of the Interstate commerce commission in the matter of compelling these railroad men to answer certain questions regarding alleged discrimination against independent operators a serious blow has been given the case of the petitioner. Without these answers and without the introduction of the contracts between the railroads and the coal companies it will be exceedingly difficult to prove the case.

Judge Lacombe finds in favor of the coal roads on every point. He denies, with a single exception, every item of the petition signed by the Interstate commerce commission. The exception was in regard to the question put to President Truesdale of the Lackawanna system concerning items of general expense.

Judge Lacombe declines to require the roads to furnish evidence as to purchases and sales of coal, and absolutely refuses to order the submission of price contracts. He holds that any contract referring to coal transportation alone should be produced, but no such contracts were called for.

An appeal from Justice Lacombe's ruling will be taken to the United States court in October.

He received the rank of major general in 1864 and retired in the following year. INVITES CLEVELAND TO ACCEPT PRESIDENCY

Richmond, Va., June 13.—If former President Grover Cleveland will accept the position he may become the successor of Thomas Jefferson as president of the University of Virginia. Since the death of Jefferson many years ago the university has had no official head, its affairs being administered by a proctor under the direction of a board of visitors. The last legislature passed a law authorizing the board to elect a president.

For this purpose they will meet at the university. Many names are mentioned for the honor and among them that of Cleveland stands out conspicuously. The alumni, several hundred strong, have made no recommendation, but Cleveland is the choice of many and there is quite a boom for him.

Nashville, Ind., June 13.—A psychological wonder in the person of Rev. John Kauffman has appeared in Hamblen township, this county. Mr. Hamblen is an Amish preacher and he hails from Elkhart county. The remarkable thing about him is that he cannot preach unless he is sound asleep. Mr. Kauffman goes to the church at 4 o'clock in the afternoon and there, upon a cot, he will lie in a sound slumber until 7 o'clock, when he arises and enters the pulpit, the congregation meanwhile having filled the church. Then he delivers a sermon, expounding the scripture in well-chosen words and, to the edification and wonder of his hearers, often continuing his discourse for two and a half and even three hours. He uses both the English and German languages in his preaching.

TAX CAUSES DECREASE IN OUTPUT OF OLEO

Nearly 35,000,000 Pounds Less of the Product Is Made, Compared With Last Year.

Washington, June 13.—There has been an enormous decrease in the amount of oleomargarine manufactured in this country as a direct result of the law providing that the packages of this product must be marked plainly, so that the consumers may know exactly what they are buying, and imposing a tax of 10 cents a pound on all oleomargarine colored in imitation of butter.

The figures prepared by direction of the commissioner of internal revenue show the sale of oleomargarine for the ten months ended April 30 last amounted to 64,511,181 pounds, as against 99,362,803 pounds in the same months a year before, a decrease of 34,851,622 pounds. The tax was paid on 62,295,140 pounds of the uncolored article, and on 2,215,711 pounds of the colored product.

The government officials assert that the only conclusion to be drawn from these figures is that a great many persons will not use the substitutes for butter made from cream when they are in a position to know exactly what is being offered them.

Shortly after the new law went into effect the production of oleomargarine decreased by nearly one-half, and for a time it appeared that this important industry would be forced from the market.

Recently, however, there has been a large increase in the manufacture of oleomargarine, and if the increase continues for another year the amount produced will reach the high point attained the last year before such rigid restrictions were imposed by congress. There has been a large increase in the sale of butter.
